

Akademie der bildenden Künste Wien
Prospekthof, Atelierhaus

12.06.2026

17:00

KOHEI SAITO

COUNTER-PLANNING AGAINST CLIMATE FASCISM

An event with Astrid Schöggel, Johan F. Hartle,
Lisa Mittendrein and Ulrich Brand

As the climate crisis intensifies, the prevailing response is increasingly characterised not by justice or solidarity, but by scarcity management, border violence and the protection of privileges. Climate fascism is a political form in which ecological collapse becomes a pretext for authoritarian control, militarised exclusion and the unequal distribution of chances to survive. In this context, the central question is no longer whether planning will return, but what kind of planning will shape the future. This lecture rejects the false choice between market solutions and technocratic state control and advocates for counter-planning: a democratic, egalitarian and ecologically grounded reorganisation of production, consumption and social reproduction. In opposition to an economic system that is inevitably dependent on ever-increasing energy and resource consumption, top-down climate policy that leaves basic needs at the mercy of the market and elitist managerialism, counter-planning is the struggle to reclaim social coordination from capital and transform it into democracy at all levels.

A...kademie der
bildenden Künste
Wien

universität
wien

Institut für Politikwissenschaft

OFSE

Austrian Foundation
for Development Research

%attac

Akademie der bildenden Künste Wien
Prospekthof, Atelierhaus
12.06.2026
17:00

Kohei Saito

Counter-Planning against Climate Fascism

An event with: Astrid Schöggel, Johan F. Hartle, Lisa Mittendrein and Ulrich Brand

As the climate crisis intensifies, the prevailing response is increasingly characterised not by justice or solidarity, but by scarcity management, border violence and the protection of privileges. Climate fascism is a political form in which ecological collapse becomes a pretext for authoritarian control, militarised exclusion and the unequal distribution of chances to survive. In this context, the central question is no longer whether planning will return, but what kind of planning will shape the future. This lecture rejects the false choice between market solutions and technocratic state control and advocates for counter-planning: a democratic, egalitarian and ecologically grounded reorganisation of production, consumption and social reproduction. In opposition to an economic system that is inevitably dependent on ever-increasing energy and resource consumption, top-down climate policy that leaves basic needs at the mercy of the market and elitist managerialism, counter-planning is the struggle to reclaim social coordination from capital and transform it into democracy at all levels.

A...kademie der
bildenden Künste
Wien

universität
wien

Institut für Politikwissenschaft

OFSE

Austrian Foundation
for Development Research

%attac

